Bausch vows...

Higher interest rates to die this session

Terming the 18 percent interest ceiling on all credit that is being demanded by banking, business, and chamber of commerce interests of the state as an "absolute rip-off of the consumer," Senator Del Bausch (D-Olympia) recently repeated his opposition to raising the limit above 12 percent.

"Senate Bill 3300 which contains the 18 percent interest ceiling is in my committee and will stay there and die with this session of the legislature, as far as I am concerned," Senator Busch stated.

He said House Republican Speaker Duane Berentson has "become the most vocal spokesman in the legislature for the big money interests who want to rip off our citizens on all kinds of credit from home mortgages to retail purchases and credit cards."

"Mr. Berentson may be running for Governor on an 18 percent interest ceiling, but the citizens in my district are satisfied with the 12 percent level contained in the state law, which was voted in by initiative in 1968," Senator Bausch said.

The Senate Financial Institutions and Insurance Committee chairman was singled out by Representative Berentson at an Olympia Chamber of Commerce meeting Wednesday for holding up legislation on raising the usury limit.

There are many other facets to the interest ceiling question than the usury rates and home mortgage and commercial credit limits, Senator Busch said.

"Local retailers whom I talk to are satisfied with the 12 percent ceiling and many home and condominium builders feel the same way," he declared.

"At a reception for the people from the 22nd Legislative District the other night," he said, "I received a standing ovation when I indicated my opposition to Senate Bill 3300 or any change in the 12 percent usury ceiling."

Since the session began, bankers and mortgage lenders have warned that the real estate and home building industry in the state will collapse if the usury limit is not raised, Senator Bausch said.

"The mortgage market is very weak, but the question is whether or not this is the result of the 12 percent limit. In my mind, the 12 percent interest ceiling is not the cause of the mortgage market decline," the chairman of the Senate Financial Institutions Committee said.

He said mortgage closings in the state dropped from $281 million in October to $90 million in January of this year, a decline of 61 percent in mortgage lending in four months.

"However, if we compare the decline in our state with that in Oregon, which has no usury limits for loans over $50,000 and with California's which has no usury limit at all, then there is very little difference between three Pacific Coast states," Senator Bausch stated.

He said Washington, with its 12 percent usury ceiling had a mortgage decline of 61 percent in the four-month period and Oregon was down 60 percent and California, 62 percent.

"These almost identical figures indicated to me that the usury limit, or its absence, doesn't have much impact on the mortgage market, at least not at this time," Senator Bausch said.

He said potential home owners are reluctant, and many unable, to pay 14 percent interest on a home loan.

"In fact, there has been no hue and cry from the citizens of the state in general for a raise in the state's usury ceiling," the 22nd District legislator said.

"Let's be realistic about inflation," he said. "The issue is not really usury, it's the fact that the average consumer can't qualify for a home loan anymore. Who can afford house payments, for examply, of $750 to $1,000 a month on an average priced home?"

"Who can qualify for an $8,000 down payment on an $80,000 home, for examply, and then pay 14 percent interest on the loan, too?

"Funds are available at 14 percent for these loans, and the moratorium in Congress

It's Carter and Reagan

In what many regard as the first test of strength in the West during the 1980 presidential campaign, President Carter and Ronald Regan are seen as "winners" in last night's Washington state democratic and republican caucuses.

The big surprise was the strong second showing of Republican Illinois Congressman John Anderson and the fizzle of George Bush. Apparently helped along by a weekend visit to the area and a glowing endorsement by the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, Anderson had , at press time won strong support in 37 percent of the polled precincts. Ronald Regan was still maintaining a 2 to 1 lead over the second runner, with Former President Gerald Ford and George Bush running a distant third and fourth, respectively.

President Carter was also maintaining a 2 to 1 margin over Senator Edward Kennedy. This is a dissappointment to the Kennedy camp , especially after yesterday's expectedly dismal showing in the Florida, Alabama and Georgia primaries, where the President beat the Senator by margins of 8 and 10 to 1. The current delegate count is 265 for Carter and 141 for Kennedy. Kennedy hopes to make a good showing in the upcoming Illinois and New York primaries, traditionally strong Kennedy country.

Turn out for last nights caucuses was relatively high, with record attendence in many precints. Many of the first time attendees were supporters of John Anderson, though the feeling at many of the meetings was that most of the participants were those persons that are traditionally politically involved.

As to the viability of the current caucus system, oppinions continue to differ. Many people at the meetings were enthusiastic about the process. However the co-chairperson of the State

School Daze again

It's optional enrollment time in Tacoma Public Schools. THat means that between March 11 and April 11 parents who want their child to attend a school other than the one in their neighborhood may go to their school principal and fill out a form requesting the school of their choice. Tacoma is one of the few major school districts in the nation that offers students such a choice.

Under the optional enrollment plan, all students are assigned to a specific attendance area according to where they reside, says Eugene Tone, administrative Assistant in the School District's pupil personnel services office. Youngsters are given priority to the school nearest their homes, even if the school exceeds its enrollment capacity. Tone notes the vast majority of students attend schools in their own neighborhood.

Optional enrollment application forms will be available March 11. Opting can be requested for the 1980-81 school year until April

IRS names new district executive

The Internal Revenue Service announced the appointment of Ms. Herma J. Hightower as Assistant District Director in Seattle. Ms. Hightower is the first black woman in the history of IRS to be appointed to such an executive position.

The new IRS Assistant District Director is a recent graduate of the Service's Executive Selection and Development Program which prepares outstanding candidates from throughout the country for top-level executive positions.

She is one of the few persons to be selected from outside the Service to participate in the executive training program. Prior to her coming to IRS, Ms. Hightower was Deputy Associate Superintendent of the Arizona Department of Education, where she was responsible for long-range planning, fiscal and program compliance and program

Mary Bridge services saved

Mary Bridge Children's Hospital in Tacoma will not have to reduce crippled children's services in cases of catastrophic illness costs, under terms of the Senate-passed budget, Senator Lorraine Wojahn (D-Tacoma) said today.

Senator Wojahn said a $200,000 appropriation was added by the Senate to pay costs of illnesses that are too great for parents to bear.

"As a result of this appropriation and with agreement by the House of Representatives, Mary Bridge will be able to continue to pay these extra costs through the end of the year," the 27th District legislator said. "These funds are matched by a federal grant for these programs."

Senator Wojahn said legislation also has been sent to Governor Ray appropriating $225,000 for poison center data banks in Seattle and Spokane.

"Also pending on the Governor's desk is Senate Bill 3499, which is designed to save up to $3.5 million in care of children who depend upon life support services. "These medically 'fragile' children are being cared for at Mary Bridge and other children's hospitals at daily costs of up to $400," Senator Wojahn said.

February has come and gone, Black History Month is a thing of the past. We must make our history a priority all year long.

Other groups tout their contributions and problems all year long. We Black people have a little more than a few good things to say about our heritage. We are making history every day, in a diverse range of fields, including chemistry, technology, medicine, food processing,cosmetics, insurance, architecture, farming, education, the military and economics. Things are better for some of us and getting worse for others. "You have not arrived" as long as we are still struggling to overcome adversity.

How does it feel to be courted by all these Presidential hopefuls, Kennedy, Bush, Carter, Mondale(notice they get a double up, a-h-h, the pleasures of incumbenc),Reagan. We must endure the annoyance, the hoopla, the cynicism, but we must get involved.

It is amusing to listen to candidates woo the different audiences (markets, if you will). They tell the Jews "Israel forever," while the Saudis get promises of increased arms spending for the defense of the Arab world. Politicians speak with forked tongue! Please someone, show me the difference between weapons used for offense and defense. It's really like a football game, everyone gets a turn to be first. These same politicians, these same would-be solons and executives preach a balanced budget, increased defense spending, and no draft, practically in the same breath. Black audiences are told "they are nobody" in the current federal budget, conservatives are told about federal spending cuts. I could go on and on, but I won't. We, the people, the salary payers, the junket and pork barrel suppliers, we must hear and see with our minds rather than our emotions.

we all know would immediately jump to their highest allowable level if a change in the law were made to 18 percent, for example, as some banking interests are demanding.

"In this sense, our usury ceiling is a strong consumer protection device," Bausch declared.

The 22nd District legislator said the proponents of usury reform have been unable to agree on what legislation is the best approach to the usury issue.

"Major banks want the rate to go up to 18 percent on all kinds of credit, including credit cards," he said. "Home mortgage lenders want to tie the rates to the federal mortgage discount rates. Others in the retail field want a rate that reflects the national prime lending rates now heading for 20 percent. There is no concensus on which the legislature can permits mortgage bankers to make such loans in Washington," Bausch noted. "But the demand just is not there in the market for such high-priced mortgages. The average home owner can't afford these prices and the 12 percent ceiling in the state law doesn't come into the picture at this time since Congress has suspended the state usury laws for 90 days, and is expected to make this suspension permanent."

Senator Bausch said credit cards have not been withdrawn, nor have products disappeared from store shelves because of the state usury ceiling, as contended by those who wish to raise the interest rates.

"This state's usury and retail investment credit limitations are not seriously affecting credit availability for the great majority of our people," he said.

"In fact, our ceilings help keep the lid on interest which make a decision, as those in the varying credit fields all have a different approach to the problem.

"These varying views only underscore the complexity of the issue," he said, "and emphasize the fact that the so called credit crisis has not reached a point where those calling for reform can speak with a single voice."

Usury is one "small aspect" of the current credit squeeze, Senator Busch said, with federal "tight money" policies having a far greater impact than the state interest rate ceiling.

"To remove or raise the ceiling in the state law only would serve to fuel inflation and conflict with federal policy to cool down the economy," he said.

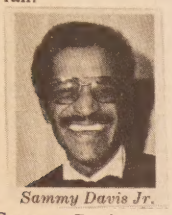
Lou Gossett

...ABC refuses to give up on "The Lazarus Syndrome," which starred Lou Gossett. Audiences have rejected it twice. Now the network has reworked the format and will try again, calling it "Mac St. Clair, M.D."

...James Earl Jones hasn't been discouraged about the cancellation of his series, "Paris." He still thinks TV is an excellent medium for an actor and will return in the 4-hour mini-series, "The Golden Moment," on NBC in early fall.



Sammy Davis Jr.

...Sammy Davis Jr. says: "My wife has figured out a sure way to keep me from gambling when I'm in Las Vegas. She spends it first."

Footlights and Static:... "I'm not so sure that this country is not set on a course that will one day return the Black man to slavery," says New York City Civil Court Judge Bruce Wright in an interview with a national magazine. When asked if he means a literal return to slavery, he says: "Yes, I honestly do. Just as the Jews fear a reprise of the Holocaust." Judge Wright, who's half-white, and a strict constructionist, recalls that not so long ago he was at a party at the home of Bob Patterson. "I was engaged in conversation with a retired Columbia professor, when to my astonishment he looked at me and said: 'If we ever have slavery again, I'd like to own you.' The gentleman was not kidding."

...Home-run record holder Hank Aaron donated the last home-run ball of his National League career to Atlanta-Fulton County Stadium. Aaron, now an Atlanta Braves vice president, said he hoped the gift would help eliminate a personal disappointment - the absence of a monument to his feats in the stadium where he played. Marvin Arrington, the chairman of the Stadium Authority said Aaron's 733rd home run ball and the bat would be prominently displayed at the stadium. Aaron, who played his last 2 years with the Milwaukee Brewers of the American League, said he saved all his home run balls from the 715th through the 754th. And the record 755th? Aaron said: "That's in some youngster's hand in Milwaukee. He refused to give it back to me."

...Steve Forrest has been signed to guest-star in MCA TV/Universal's Operation Prime Time four-hour two-part presentation of John D. MacDonald's bestseller "Condominium."

...Over 80 disco dancers were called to do "their thing" when gossip columnist Dina Moran (Kim Cattrall) does a scene with Bobby Vinton where she follows him to a disco and has an out-and-out fight with him on the dance floor in MCA TV/Universal's "The Gossip Columnist."

In the Wings:... Redd Foxx was having a good time working in Las Vegas, when along came Fred Silverman, who said he needed some help to revive NBC. Fred Silverman's request was simple and Redd responded. "Would he revive his Fred Sanford character?" Fox said he would. Redd says that TV is still very exciting to him. Redd asserts that he wouldn't have gone to NBC to ask them to revive the show. He wanted them to come to him. "Sanford" will be aired in its old time slot. He doesn't forsee any of the problems that plagued the first show. "I'm not difficult to work with," he observes.

...Not only is "Black English" a legitimate language, but Americans of all colors speak English that has been transformed by the language of Black Americans, novelist James Baldwin says. Baldwin, who is Black, spoke at a 3-day symposium in Detroit last weekend on Black English and education. He cited the words "jazz" and "funky" originated by Blacks, to illustrate his point. "The real problem is not Black people's language but the lack of respect in which their countrymen hold them," Baldwin said. "If through language I am forced to deny my origins, I become useless, an imitation white man. Black people and their language are the victims of a conspiracy that has failed." Baldwin is the author of, among many other works, "Another Country," "Go Tell It on the Mountain" and "Just Above My Head."

...Reggie Jackson was going to the ariport with his agent, Matt Merola, when they decided they wanted hot dogs. They stopped at Chock full o' Nuts and the Yankees slugger was so mobbed by autograph fans that he barely got out in time to make the plane to Honolulu for a TV assignment.

Observations in Covering the Nite Beat:... Talented Ben Vereen is generating even more publicity as his new ABC-TV series "Tenspeed and Brown Shoe" gets off to a winning start. But he's determined to keep his private life out of the limelight. That's why so few people realize that the 33-year-old star is married with four children. That's a pact Ben and Nancy Vereen made 13 years ago when they wed. "But it has nothing to do with the fact that Nancy is white," Vereen quickly added. And they wanted to protect their children from photographers' flashing light bulbs. Ben and Nancy felt it would be better for Ben's career if people thought he was a bachelor. After all, they were married long before Ben's name became a household word after his captivating performance as Chicken George in "Roots." Nancy and Ben live in a sprawling Spanish villa in Encino, Ca. with their daughters Malaida, 9, Naja, 8, Kabara, 4, and Karon, 2. Ben also has a son, Ben, from an earlier marriage. The boy attends boarding school on the East Coast.

Senate Constitution committee says its not workable and does not encourage broad participation by the elcetorate. Joe Murphy, state democratic chairman, said that both candidates (Kennedy and Carter) did a really good job of organizing and that the results will be significant as the first indication of the feelings of the western residents in this campaign". No delegates to the national conventions were chosen at this time, that will be done later in the year.

Schools

11. Parents will receive notification of action on the request by the end of May.

Parents of children who will be entering kindergarten in September 1980 should contact their neighborhood school principal to obtain the necessary forms. The optional enrollment period for incoming kindergarten students will be May 7-8. Parents will be notified of action on their requests before the end of this school year. Waiting lists and ethnic balance considerations apply to kindergarten requests only.

Tone notes that three of Tacoma's elementary schools-Stanley, McCarver and Bryant--do not fall under the optional enrollment plan. "They are districtwide schools where enrollment is by application from throughout the district," he says.

There are various obstacles which should be considered before making application to attend a school outside of one's neighborhood, Tone says. "Transportation, distance and time, the curriculum, success in related areas, the child's adjustment in a new school setting, friends, activities and athletic eligibility should all be considered," he says.

Under optional enrollment, an incoming tenth grader is automatically eligible for interscholastic athletics regardless of his/her primary attendance area. Tone reminds high school students that once they have enrolled and/or turned out for an interscholastic sports activity, their athletic eligibility is established in that particular school. "If a high school student transfers to another school after establishing eligibility, there is a waiting period," Tone says, noting that at the junior high level the waiting period is only through the current sports season.

In the Seattle District, which has responsibility for Federal tax administration throughout Washington, Ms. Hightower will be involved in the day-to-day administration of all aspects of the IRS program and the activities of more than 800 employees working in 16 offices throughout the State.

She is a graduate of Arizona State University with B.A. and M.A. degrees in education and a Ph.D. in administration. She received a commendation in 1977 from the U.S. Office of Education for administrative leadership and was also selected in the same year to deliver an original research presentation before the American Educational Research Association. In 1976, she received the Delta Sigma Theta Community Services Award for her activities in the Phoenix area.

Prior to leaving the Phoenix area for the IRS training program and her short assignment in Los Angeles, Ms. Hightower was on the executive boards of several Phoenix community action programs including the Mayor's Human Relations Committee, the Opportunities Industrialization Center (OIC) and the Phoenix Urban League.

Among the activities enjoyed by the new IRS executive are participation in community organizations, reading and traveling. She is one of a relatively small number of people who had an opportunity to visit the People's Republic of China prior to the formalization of relations with that country. Ms. Hightower also notes that in coming to Seattle, she looks forward to trying some of the typical Northwest activities such as fishing, skiing and the like.

Rene Thompson's Sports World

Bellarmine downs Fort Vancouver

"OH, WHAT A NIGHT" best describes the Regional III Class AAA tournament action in the University of Puget Sound fieldhouse March 7, between Tacoma's Bellarmine Lions and the Fort Vancouver Trappers.

It was one of those nights the Lions will remember and the Trappers would rather forget, as they lost their first game of the year.

Seats, stands and halls were jammed with fans. When it came to school spirit, neither team could be beat, but on the court it was entirely a different story. Bellarmine proved they were superior, downing Fort Vancouver by seven points.

Forward Douglas Thompson's sharpshooting sparked the Lions to a 13 point lead at half time, pumping in six outside jumpshots and four more points at the line. It seemed the first half belonged to Thompson with 16 points, the second half to center Bryce McPhee, shooting all of the 27 points in the third and fourth quarter. Good ball control and team work is what led the Lions to victory, and a final score of Bellarmine 75, Fort Vancouver 68.

Lions guard Todd Erwin had seven assists and five points for the evening. Forward Joe Bordeaux ended with eight points and five rebounds. Starter Tim Bordeaux made nine points, and Thompson hooped 22 points, with perfect shooting at the free throw line and 10 caroms. McPhee put up 23 points, pulled down 10 boards and two assists to his credit.

The Lions bench made good. Greg Hamilton and Andy Hallis tallied four points each. Steve Anstett's team attained 25 out of 28 charity shots; Fort Vancouver, 12-18; from the field Bellarmine 25-46; the Trappers 28-29. John Click lead Vancouvers team with 21 points followed by Gregg Priggs' 17 points and 11 rebounds.

Thursday, March 13 at 2 p.m. the Seattle Colliseum will host the Region III Class AAA tournament, with Bellarmine's deadly inside and outside attack matched up against the tough Puyallup Vikings. The Lions will face Greg Hammer, master scorer of 33 points and 20 rebounds in tournament play March 8 against Fort Vancouver, final score Puyallup 73 - Fort Vancouver 61.

Puyallup 75 - Clover Park 57

Puyallup downed Clover Park March 7, at the University of Puget Sound fieldhouse in a spectacular game. The Vikings' Williams had 32 points, Bradbury had 18 points.

Bethel 84 - Shorecrest 70

Bethel braves worked for a berth in the Region III Class AAA tournament and earned it. 20 points for 6'5" center Jeff Valentine and Robert Boyd; 21 points for Matt Piper, Bethel's forward.

The Tacoma Facts will be covering the Region III Class AAA tournament in Seattle. Look for it in the next issue of The Tacoma Facts. Good luck to all contenders in the tournament.

Sportsworld... Phil Esposito of the New York Rangers wants a curb on National Hockey League brawls, which he says is "ruining our games." Esposito spoke after the Rangers defeated the New York Islanders in a game with six major penalties, nine minors, a game misconduct and a 10-minute misconduct. "The artistic side (of hockey) will show through if we stop that garbage. It's definitely time for a change," said Espisito. He suggests adding a penalty for players milling around when a fight breaks out. "If a fight starts, the players should be immediately ordered to their benches," said Esposito.

...Billy Martin and Charlie Finley have each other now, till death do they part - or at least until Finely unloads the Oakland A's. But, as much as they have gushed those words of admiration the last couple of days, perhaps they have forgotten that Martin once called Finley a born liar. And where have we heard those words before? The incident came during the 1972 American League playoffs. Bert Campaneris was 3-for-3 with 2 stolen bases in the second games, and Lerrin LaGrow, who then pitched for Detroit, hit Campenaris on the ankle. Campenaris responded by trying to hit LaGrow with a bat and was suspended for the rest of the playoffs. Finley contended he had seen a note from Martin instructing LaGrow to hit Campaneris on purpose. To which Martin replied: "He's a liar. I hate liars with a passion. He's a born liar."

...Golf handicaps are the great equalizers. They help ensure an exciting and enjoyable round of golf when a scratch amateur and a Sunday afternoon hack team on the links. Dick Tiddy, head professional at the Bay Hill Club and Lodge in Orlando, Florida said that the Bay Hill Course is rated by the Florida State Golf Association at 73.7 or 2.7 strokes over the suggested par of 71. That means an eight handicapper from a course rated even with its suggested par would receive an additional two or three handicap strokes when playing Bay Hill. Both Bill Carey, president of the Florida Golf Association and Dick Tiddy think the rating is fair. If you don't believe them, just ask the touring pros who compete every February at the Bay Hill Classic, sponsored by Brown & Williamson's Rich Lights cigarettes.

Sports Briefing:... The Houston Rockets' Rick Barry says he has figured out why there are so many basketball players around these days whose only inclination seems to be to launch a non-stop stream of 28-foot jump shots. It's all the media's fault. "Every single story begins with Sam Smith scored 25 points and Joe Dokes 20 as the so-and-so's beat the so-and-so," Barry complained. "I'm talking now about the wire stories on out-of-town games. That is so superficial. It hardly ever tells the real story of the game. The problem is, the kids who are just learning to play look at the papers and see the guys whose names are mentioned are the ones who score. That becomes the most important thing to them, and they never do learn to become complete players."

...Since Bobby Sheehan became a professional hockey player in 1969 he has played for no fewer than 12 clubs, from the Montreal Canadians to the Rhode Island Reds, from the New York Rangers to the late, great New Jersey Knights. In that time, he has been traded twice, sold three times, jumped leagues twice, become a free agent three times, sent to the minors twice and not invited to training camp once. The problem wasn't so much his talent. It was just that Sheehan often spent more time working on a six-pack than on his slap shot. Now, however, Sheehan has settled down and seems to have found a home with the Colorado Rockies. "Now I have two daughters and lots of responsibility, so I don't touch the stuff anymore," he says. "Oh, I have two or three beers after a game. Doctors say it's good for the heart. But nothing like I used to. Then it wasn't two or three, but maybe 23."

...His left hand still bears the scars of a Christmas Eve handshake with the flywheel of his boat motor, but Dennis Leonard says he will be ready to take his place in the pitching rotation of the Kansas City Royals when the season starts. Leonard has a purple scar running across the top of the first three knuckles on his left hand. Fortunately, he is a righthanded pitcher. He sees no reason why he can't return to the 20-victory form he enjoyed in the 1977 and 1978 seasons. Last season, Leonard was plagued by an elbow injury, and his record dipped to 14-12. "It's not going to keep me out of my boat," Leonard said. "It's going to keep me from sticking my hand in the motor."

...Jimmy Conors was said to have been handled like a prize fighter during his rise to the top in tennis, and maybe some of it rubbed off. Incensed when a young spectator tried to kiss his wife, Connors went into the stands after his losing match to Vijay Amritraj at Salisbury, MD. and slugged the offender. Connors immediately iced down his left wrist, and WCT Invitational Tournament Officials put John Sadri on standby alert as his possible replacement. But Connors insisted. "I'm in good shape." What about the ice bag on his wrist? "It's just resting there," Connors said.

...World Tennis magazine polled players on ways to beat Bjorn Borg. Bob Hewitt said: "Break his bloody legs." Raz Reid said, "Wait until he gets older." Eddie Dibbs said, "Get a gun." Steve Krulevitz suggested, "Get a well-endowed girl and send her up to his room the night before the match."

...Bill Russell tells the story of how Wilt Chamberlain, then with the Philadelphia Warriors, drove down to Washington on an off-day and asked his friend Elgin Baylor to gather some friends for a pickup game. Baylor got a team together for Wilt, then whipped him thoroughly. Asked why Baylor's team won so handily, Baylor said: "Well, the newspapers in Philadelphia said that Wilt and four cheerleaders could beat anybody. So I got him four cheerleaders."

...Pete Rose concedes he is "one of a very few players who still get paid if they (the players) strike," but he hopes contract negotiations don't come to that (a walkout)." Rose, whose four-year contract tops $3 million, said a strike would "really hurt the sport because there are people who don't forget. But we have to stand together, and I'd have to consider staying behind" with teammates who decided to strike."

Little family has over 170 years of service

The name is Little, but they've done a lot for the service.

Chief Warrant Officer 4 Alvin F. Little, Direct Support Electronics Maintenance Officer for the 9th Infantry Division, and his immediate family have more than 170 years of combined service to the Armed Forces and U.S. Government.

Little's father, Frank, was an Army master sergeant who retired after 30 years service. His mother, Alvita, also retired with 30 years Civil Service as a GS-9 executive secretary.

Brother Arthur retired at McChord AFB with 22 years Air Force service, and his wife, Wilda, has 14 years government service. She's secretary to Brigadier General Charles F. Gorden, 4th ROTC Region commander. Their son, Frank, is a senior at the University of Washington's Air Force ROTC program and will be commissioned in June.

Little's brother, Harold, served 10 years in the U.S. Army Reserve, and a sister, Vivian Lee, is a GS-14 with 12 years service. Her husband, Owen, was in the Army four years.

Little has been in the Army 27 years, and his wife, Ida, is a GS-9 with 22 years of Civil Service. Their son, Alvin Jr.. is also a senior ROTC cadet at the Universtiy of Washington and also serves in the Washington State National Guard. He is slated to be commissioned in June 1981.

The only member of Little's family who hasn't been involved in some type of government work is his daughter Alvina, but then, the Army doesn't have too many openings for seven year-olds who haven't completed second grade.
